ABOUT THE PARK
Devou Park is a city park in Covington, Kentucky. With 700 acres, the park contains nature trails, playgrounds, and an 18-hole golf course. The park's Behringer-Crawford Museum details the natural history of the area. The Drees Pavilion, a banquet hall, is located in Devou Park.

Before this sprawling oasis of rolling hills and scenic groves was transformed into a public park, it was William P. Devou and Sarah Ogden Devou's family farm. In 1910, their children, Charles and William P. Devou, donated the estate to the city of Covington for future generations.

Backcountry Trails
Carving more than eight miles of secluded tracks through the rolling landscape of Devou Park, the Backcountry Trails are a haven for hikers, mountain bikers and anyone seeking a refreshing retreat from the hustle and bustle of the city.

Golf
Tucked among Devou Park's rolling hills, just minutes from downtown Covington and Cincinnati, our 18-hole golf course offers a 6,001-yard layout with plush zoysia fairways and bent grass greens.
